

Don't Lose Your Child to a Teenage Suicide!

How to Keep Your Teenager from Being a Statistic and Committing Suicide!

Dear Friend,

As the mother of 4 teenagers, I know full well that teenagers can be moody and get depressed. But sometimes "normal" teenage depression isn't normal at all turns into something fatal!

Too often we read the tragic headlines about someone else's teenager who has just died as a result of a teen suicide. Not only is a young life gone by his or her own hand, but the lives of the family and friends that teenager leaves behind are forever changed. All the hopes for a bright future are swept away in a single instant. All the dreams of college, marriage and children and suddenly gone. We silently thank God that it didn't happen to our teenager, but we worry that one day it might. After all, it did happen to someone's child.

It's hard to ignore the frightening facts:

- Teenage Suicide is the 3rd leading cause of teenage deaths
- Boys are more likely to succeed at killing themselves than girls
- Girls are more likely to think about suicide and attempt it.
- 17% of all teenagers seriously consider suicide
- 8.4% of all teenagers made a suicide attempt

It's frightening and all too real. Teenage suicide is the 3rd leading cause of death for people between the age of 14 and 24. But it doesn't have to be that way. You can change those statistics! The best defense against teenage suicide is knowledge. By knowing the facts of what causes teenagers to turn to suicide instead of seeking help from their families is how to prevent it. You can arm yourself with the knowledge to break this terrible tragedy before it strikes your family or a family that you know! If you knew how to keep your child from slipping into a state of despair to the point where they feel there is no other alternative than to take their own life to make the pain go away, wouldn't you do it?

Learn How to Stop Teenage Suicides

Before It's Too Late

Research shows that parents who know how to look for the signs of depression, bullying, peer pressure and mental illness, and seek treatment quickly stand a better chance of helping their child who is in crisis. Early education and prevention will keep a teenager from feeling as if they have no place to turn when things in their life overwhelm them. Unfortunately, many parents don't know where to start or how to approach the topic with their child. They also don't know where to go for help. I've created this e-book How to Stop Teenage Suicide Before it Happens as a tool for parents to keep their teenagers from becoming a statistic by committing suicide.

Teenage suicide doesn't just destroy a teenager's life. It can destroy an entire family and community. When a teenager commits suicide, it leaves those around him or her scrambling to find answers as to why this could happen. It is easy to lay blame on a parent or the bully at school, but depression is the main reason why teenage suicide occurs and there are many reasons that cause severe teenage depression.
